OPEN MEETING – GUESTS WELCOME

Since 1981 Athena has identified young women of promise, and this year's program continues this fine tradition and is sure to provide an uplifting and hopeful window into the future. Ten very special young women will be introduced, each outstanding in her own way. See page 3 for a list of those to be recognized.

Each honoree will comment on one accomplishment that has given her great satisfaction. You'll be inspired and impressed by their stories. Please join us and bring friends who'll enjoy meeting some truly incredible teens.

President's Message

Take a Risk

I am watching my great nephew navigate his first roll-over. As I am writing this, he has done it twice in 15 minutes – a sure sign that he realized the impact he had on the whoosh of movement that left him, head facing at the ceiling, with a silly grin on his little face. I applaud his success with coos and smiles, reassuring him that the risk and effort was worth the result, but I think his feeling of mastery over his environment was truly reward enough.

As we get older it seems we have more to protect, making even simple risks seem much greater. We protect our persona in the world; the one we have developed over the years; the way we see ourselves and the way we want others to see us.

We become sensitive not just to the risk of trying something new, but also to the risk of losing something gained. But it is taking that risk, stepping into a new experience that helps us to learn and grow.

That's probably why I loved the Valentine's Day card that came in the mail from Mason, Black & Caballero P.A. law partners (and some of our Athena sisters) last month. It was a fun, light reminder to step out and get the most out of life. Borrowing a William Purkey quote, it reminded us to "dance like there's nobody watching / Love like you'll never be hurt, / Sing like there's nobody listening, / And live like it's heaven on earth."

It reminds us that without taking risks, we risk losing the growth that new experiences bring. Like my great nephew we've got to take a risk to get the exhilarating whoosh of being in a new position with a new view of the world.

Here's to us, taking risks!

Upcoming Bonus Events

April 16, 5-7 p.m. – Reception and Tour of CAMLS. The Bonus Committee is excited to announce an evening at the Center for Advanced Medical Learning and Simulation! CAMLS is a 90,000 square foot, state-of-the-art, three-story facility with every possible form of health professional education and training. CAMLS integrates simulation technology, aviation science, team training and evidence-based best practice into innovative programs with measureable outcomes. A CAMLS self-parking lot is located across Brorein Street with an entrance on Florida Avenue. Visit CAMLS at <http://www.camls-us.org>. $10 cost covers refreshments; guests welcome.

April 20, 9:15 a.m. - Lowry Park Zoo. We have an exciting bonus opportunity to interact with the animals at Lowry Park Zoo, with admission waived! The zoo has created a private event just for us on Saturday April 20, in which Athena Society members, their children and friends will make toys for the animals, similar to the Russian dolls which open to reveal a series of smaller dolls. The children (and adults) will then be able to watch the orangutans open and interact with the toys they've made! The event lasts from 9:15 until 10:30 a.m. at which point guests are welcome to enjoy the zoo for the remainder of the day. Part of Lowry Park Zoo's mission is not just to care for the animals but also to enrich them with, for example, mentally stimulating toys. Athena also created this project in response to members who wanted to show their children the fun benefits of volunteering in a memorable way that will leave a lasting impact. The zoo has been kind enough to waive admission (usually $17.50 for children and $22.50 for adults). In exchange, and to show our support of a great cause, we are suggesting those who attend contribute $10 per person as a donation to the zoo as well as to cover the costs of booking the Zoo School, buying craft materials and paying for staff time. This event is limited to the first 50 people who respond, including a maximum of 30 children.

May 1, 6-7 p.m. - Tampa Bay History Center. The Florida Wildlife Expedition, the 100 mile trek over 1,000 miles was made by three men and one woman. Come hear Mallory Lykes Dimmitt's environmental exploration of this amazing journey. Free, with cash bar. Register via our website or by calling 228-0097. Enjoy dinner afterwards in Columbia Café at the History Center. Questions may be directed to lleavengood@tampabayhistorycenter.org,

Community Action Committee Report

Congress Reauthorizes Two Critical Acts to Protect Women

By Joanne Lighter

President Obama signed the reauthorization of the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) which also incorporated the Trafficking Victims Protection Act on March 8th, following a year of Congressional negotiation. Originally passed in 1994, this Act has helped decrease female deaths and harm by funding direct services for victims of domestic violence and sexual assault. The original funding provided safe shelter, training of law enforcement and maintenance of hotlines to connect victims with services.

The reauthorized bill will continue to help advocates decrease violence in the early stages and provides for increased services to lower the rate of domestic homicide. New provisions expand services for teens and young adults for prevention and intervention services through Teen Dating Violence initiatives. The bill also removes critical barriers for members of the lesbian, gay, transgender and bi-sexual community – all of whom face challenges in the legal and judiciary arenas. The bill strengthens federal penalties for repeat sex offenders and creates the federal “Rape Shield Law.” The bill calls for increased rates of prosecution, conviction and sentencing of offenders through community networks of law enforcement and prosecution units and the development of domestic violence dockets. It protects women from bearing the expense of receiving rape exams or protection orders and states that a victim’s protection order will be recognized and enforced in all state, tribal and territorial jurisdictions of the United States.

In the same bill, Congress also reauthorized the Trafficking Victims Protection Act that maintains protection for immigrants who experience domestic or sexual violence, as well as strengthening safety for victims of Trafficking. The bill expands protections for Native American women who experience some of the highest rates of violence in the country. VAWA extends protections through the tribal justice systems to bring abusers to justice regardless of their race or gender. In a poignant moment during hearings Representative Gwen Moore, Democrat of Wisconsin and a victim of domestic and sexual violence herself, spoke passionately about the need to pass the Senate’s bill. “I pray that this body will do as the Senate has done and come together as one to protect all women from violence,” Ms. Moore said. “As I think about the L.G.B.T. victims who are not here, the native women who are not here, the immigrants who aren’t in this bill, I would say, as Sojourner Truth would say, ‘Ain’t they women?’ ” “Ain’t they women?” she repeated emphatically.
